my fav BL depict trauma Maturely, whereas your BL is a day at the circus when it comes to the pain of gays

When Freud, for example, asserts the child's great need for the father's protection, telling us that it ousts "the oceanic feeling," what could this feeling refer to but the bond to the mother? Freud then admits his discomfort with the ecstasy of oneness, with primordial states—in short, with the irrational; his preference is for the Apollonian world of dry land, and he quotes Schiller's diver: "Let him rejoice who breathes up here in the roseate light."¹⁵ Likewise, when Lasch links together the absence of the father, the dependence on the mother, and the "persistence of archaic fantasies," he implies that without paternal intervention the image of the "primitive mother" necessarily overwhelms the child.¹⁶ In other theories, as we shall see, the contrast between a primitive / narcissistic mother and a civilized /
